Christmas fairs are a kind of motif that builds up the atmosphere of the festive period, and they're a great reason to visit European metropolises during this time. They also promote the city and support tourism, culture, and the economy. Two Polish cities, Kraków and Gdańsk, were recommended by the The Times as among their top favourite Christmas fairs. The Times praised the fair in the capital of Małopolska, for, among other things, its charming setting and festive atmosphere, and highlighted the city's unique architecture as well as the abundance of wooden decorations and traditional delicacies.
